It’s that time of year again when bikes begin to come up missing!

How to Help Keep Your Bike From Getting Stolen

Previous Article from the Vista Plantation Safety Committee

Be wary of cable locks, they are easily chopped with wire cutters. They might be enough to deter passing theft and opportunists, but they are ineffective against seasoned thieves. U-Locks or D-locks are largely considered to be the most secure as they are made of hardened steel. Look for bike -specific locks from reputable brands, they also have a sleeve designed to get tangled in the teeth of a saw, making it more challenging to cut. Chains are also a good option, but again you get what you pay for; a hardware store chain and the lock will not last long against a hacksaw or bolt cutters. They are pretty heavy, but offer tons of security and add flexibility as to what the lock will fit around.

Two or three locks (even cables) are better than one. The more difficult you can make it look to steal your bike, the less a thief will want to hassle with it. With any lock, you want to limit the amount of leverage a would-be thief can generate, so try and purchase one that only just clears the tubing on your bike and whatever you're locking it to and try to pass it through as many components on your bike as possible. Try to keep the lock as close to the bottom bracket as possible to make the lock awkward to get to. Top priority is passing the lock through the frame, then the rear wheel and front wheel last. If your bike will be locked in an area known for bike theft, consider a second lock to secure the wheels to the frame and the primary lock to secure the frame.

Don’t forget to lock your wheels and your saddle/seat. Quick releases and hex bolts make it easy for thieves to snatch these components. Given that most bikes can be almost disassembled with a 4 and 5mm hex wrench, a thief can steal your handlebars and seat with just about any multi tool. Security bolts that work similar to the locking wheel nuts used on cars require a special tool to turn the bolt, rather than one readily available at every hardware store.

If possible bring your bike inside at night and when you will be away for an extended time. It may be a hassle to lug it up a flight of stairs, but many bikes are stolen at night because there are fewer eyes and ears around to deter thieves.

Take photos of your bike plus any unique components and the serial number which is usually located on the underside of the bottom bracket. If there is no serial number create a unique number and engrave it yourself. Keep a file on all of your bikes that includes receipts, serial numbers, and photos. If your bike is recovered this will help identify ownership.
